I Bet You Didn't Know

By Kloey Seegmiller

We all know where hurricane city is in Utah. I mean that's where HMS is located. But there may be some things I Bet You Didn't Know about the town.

To start off we all have been desperate to know how Hurricane got its name and why its pronounced (her-a-kin). The reason for the weird pronunciation and being called really windy is in the 1860s a man named Erastus Snow named hurricane after experiencing a whirl wind that blew off the top of a buggy when he was in it. Snow then said "that was a hurricane. We'll name this hurricane hill". Now why is it pronounced (her-a-kin)? Well hurricane was pronounced (hur-a-kun) by the local people mimicking the accent of the early Liverpoolian settlers.

Now we will be interviewing MaKinli Segler on her input on Hurricanes history. She thinks "Hurricane's history is very cool. I think it is really cool that so many of my ancestors have stories that take place right here in Hurricane." Everett Breiter says " I think that Hurricane's name is very well named because it is very windy here." now instead of you asking how Hurricane got its name, you can now tell others about Hurricanes history.

Embarrassing Moments

By Loraini Faiga

Everyone has a embarrassing moment, whether its tripping going up the stairs, or hugging a stranger on accident, we all have them, it just happens, a couple of students at Hurricane Middle School have shared a couple of their embarrassing moments.

Tahila Brown a Ninth Grader, tripped over nothing and almost face planted during Jr ROTC, and two people were in the room to watch it happen, Daniel Kleinman, an eighth grader, was at the air port waiting for his brother to come home, he saw a man that looked like him facing the opposite way, so Daniel ran up to him and hugged him, than he saw his brother across the room, he hugged a stranger. A eight grader, Clay Borden, was at lunch holding his food and he fell while holding his food. Some of us has experienced this one, when a teacher starts to talk about you, well this happened to Madi Rameriz a ninth grader.

The History of Soccer

By Rebecca Wadsworth

Who invented soccer? How did it become so popular? To start off with, soccer was started in England in the 19th century with the foundation of the Football Association. The person who invented is named Ebenezer Cobb Morley. He was known as the “father of soccer”. The games way back when, that resembled football were played on meadows and roads in England. Besides from kicks, the game involved also punches of the ball with the fist. This early form of football was also much more rough and violent than the modern way of playing.

Now we need to answer the question: How did soccer become popular? Soccer is so popular because it is a fun game that almost anyone can play. It is also so popular because of its simplicity and the rules are easy to understand. It also has a good mix of Athletic skills such as, body coordination, long distance running, and sprints. A former soccer player and a former HMS counselor stated “I love how it is a individual and team sport, Its your job to play your position correctly, and to help your teammates, it teaches you self discipline and resilience. Alexis Malone a former soccer player, stated, “ She loved hanging out with her team and if your mad you can get your rage out” . Soccer is a amazing sport, and it can be enjoyed by anyone, it doesnt matter your age, gender, or race anyone can play soccer!

Have You Ever Wondered? Mrs. Shumway Edition!!

By Meilie Allen

Hey there, curious minds of middle school! Ever stopped to think about how some awesome teachers ended up choosing their path? Well, guess what? Today, you're in for a treat! Let's dive into the story of Mrs. Shumway, the fantastic art teacher right here at HMS. Get this: Mrs. Shumway wasn't just any teacher – she's a part of this school's history! Yep, you heard it right. She grew up here and walked this very school as a student. Can you believe it?

Now, imagine Mrs. Shumway back when she was a high school senior at HHS. Graduation was around the corner, and she had a big question in her mind: “What do I want to do next?”

Then, one day, a golden opportunity knocked on her door. The school's counseling center was offering internships to students, “...I got placed in a Language Arts class...” she states. And guess where she ended up? Right here at HMS! Throughout that semester, she worked side by side with the teacher and her class.

And guess what happened? Magic. Yep, during those months, something incredible sparked within her. She realized that she absolutely adored teaching and guiding students to be their absolute best selves, “It was during that experience that I discovered how much I love teaching and helping students become their best!” she exclaims.

After her graduation, she attended Dixie State University (Utah Tech). A surprising fact, she actually started taking the classes to be a history teacher, but soon realized how much she missed taking art. She then switched over to the Art Education program. “..I got to take the classes where I furthered my skills in a lot of different media...” she finishes. She now loves getting to teach where she went to school as a student.

So, my curious friends, that's the story of how Mrs. Shumway discovered her passion for teaching. It all started right here, where you're sitting now. Remember, every teacher has an exciting journey that led them to the classroom. Who knows? Maybe someday, you'll find your passion in the most unexpected places too!
